NSC Driver Safety Training

The National Safety Council Distracted Driving Online Course is designed to motivate drivers to change their risky behaviors and attitudes about distracted driving, and to help organizations lower their liability risks and costs associated with motor vehicle collisions and incidents.

Course description

The course delivers an engaging, interactive format to educate drivers about the risks, dangers and consequences of cell phone use while driving. Participants will learn about the science of distracted driving, myths about multitasking, impact of distracted driving, financial and legal ramifications, state and federal laws, and much more. A Certificate of Completion is included with each enrollment and can be printed immediately after successfully completing the course.

What participants will learn

The 90-minute course offers the most relevant, leading-edge content and scientific data related to distracted driving. The curriculum is tailored to the participant's profile, risk-level, behaviors and attitudes about distracted driving. A comprehensive self-assessment sets the pace for the course by delivering appropriate content, videos, driving scenarios, activities and exercises based on the individual's risk-level. A re-assessment and evaluation of the participant's behavior, attitudes and risk-level concludes the course. The full-length version provides organizations the option to include their corporate cell-phone policy into the course.

The 45-minute version contains the primary learning points and scientific research from the 90-minute Course. The abridged version contains many of the same videos, exercises and scenarios from the full-length program. A basic self-assessment identifies the participant's driving behavior, attitude and risk-level with a re-assessment at the end of the course. An organization does not have the option to include their corporate cell phone policy into the abbreviated version.
