Fayetteville Carrier Becomes Newest “Million-Aire”

City Carrier Clarence Owens displays his Million Mile Award with District Manager/Lead Executive Angela Curtis.

City Carrier Clarence Owens has spent a lot of time on the road during his 41 years with the Postal Service. Recently, District Manager Angela Curtis took time to recognize Owens for driving safely during those four decades.

Curtis presented Owens with the district's most recent Million Mile Award, recognizing more than 30 years of no preventable accidents. Curtis thanked Owens for his dedication to safety and reminded employees at Fayetteville's Lafayette Station that the goal every day is for each of them to perform their duties and return home safely. "There is no compromising when it comes to the safety of our employees," said Curtis.

For his part, Owens says attention to detail is critical. "I adhere to the safety regulations because I know they exist for a reason. You can't take shortcuts when it comes to safety."

Fayetteville Postmaster Dean Fields and Customer Service Manager Linda Cooper participated in the ceremony and provided a breakfast for all employees to celebrate with Owens.
