

NSC Announces Superior Safety Performance Award Recipients

Itasca, IL – The National Safety Council awarded 1 company with the Superior Safety Performance Award in October. Superior Safety Performance recipients have achieved 10 consecutive years without an occupational injury or illness resulting in lost employee work days or death.

In 2010, work injuries cost the nation nearly $177 billion. There were an estimated 3,783 unintentional work deaths. Companies that motivate and inspire safe behavior are able to reduce workplace injuries and deaths and improve their bottom lines. When employees are encouraged and recognized for safe behavior, companies can build strong corporate safety cultures.

Superior Safety Performance Award is part of the Council's Safety Motivation and Recognition Award Program. Congratulations to the following companies:
