2014 NSC Texas Safety Conference and Expo

March 31 - April 1, 2014

Galveston, Texas

Safety, health and environmental professionals face both new and continuing challenges in the workplace today. In addition, today's busy professional has minimal time to dedicate towards continuing education. The Internet is convenient and far-reaching, but it is increasingly difficult to sort the expert advice from the rest of the noise. Where do you turn to find the resources you need to lead your safety program?

The 2014 NSC Texas Safety Conference & Expo spans three days and offers a myriad of opportunities for safety professionals to connect with the latest safety news, resources and each other face-to-face. All in one place. All in three days.

About NSC Texas Safety Conference & Expo

The National Safety Council Texas Safety Conference & Expo is an annual event for safety professionals from the Gulf Coast and beyond looking to improve safety in their organization. The conference allows attendees of all experience levels to learn best practices and trends, network in a variety of settings and discover safety solutions from more than 170 exhibitors.

Twenty-five percent of crashes in the state of Texas are attributed to distracted driving, according to the Texas Department of Transportation. Using cell phones while driving significantly increases crash risk. This session will explain why using cell phones while driving increases crash risk, the legal liability that employers may face if employees crash and what employers can do to protect their employees. Participants will receive a copy of the NSC Cell Phone Policy Kit with resources to implement an employer policy.

This year's DDAM campaign, Hands-free is not risk-free, seeks to explain why drivers cannot rely on hands-free devices for safety. Beyond where a driver's hands and eyes are, where the driver's mind is also matters.

Our brains actually do not multi-task, contrary to popular thinking. We "toggle task" when we try to do two mentally-intense activities at the same time, such as driving and talking on a phone. Switching back and forth between the two tasks is too much for the brain to handle

As a result, drivers can miss seeing up to half of the roadway environment right in front of them. Drivers could miss seeing stop signs, traffic lights or even bicyclists and pedestrians. April's DDAM campaign will help you explain this to employees and the public.

Get the Texas Challenge!

Get the National Safety Council Texas Challenge Injury Facts Quiz! The Texas Challenge automatically posts new weekly questions and answers about unsafe driving risks. It's a great way to educate people about where the real driving dangers are. It also shares Safety Tips to encourage safe driving.

Video Contest

Do you have a creative way to show why hands-free cell phone use is not safer than handheld cellphones? NSC wants to see it! Send us an original video by March 14, 2014 that illustrates how - and why - drivers using hands-free devices still are cognitively distracted and you could win up to $2,000 and receive national recognition!

Winners will be announced in April.
