First Aid programs not only save lives, they make good business sense

The National Safety Council® Standard First Aid, CPR, and AED Online program is an affordable way to teach employees lifesaving skills at their own pace, right from their desk. It's the most convenient way to prepare your employees for an emergency at work or at home, where employees are even more likely to be injured.

Even if you already offer first aid training, online training is an excellent refresher tool to keep your employees' skills sharp.

Our online program includes the most recent lifesaving information and is more user-friendly and engaging than ever before. In 2001, the National Safety Council was the first to launch first aid and CPR training via the Internet.

Our online programs are better than ever!

- Improved navigation guides you through the course with ease
- Go at your own pace and take modules in any order
- Bookmark feature allows you to pick up where you left off
- New graphics, interactive animation and realistic sound effects bring the course to life
- Online program covers updated content from our emergency care classroom programs

It's flexible. Train one person or an entire organization, right from their desk. Your employees can take the modules in any order and the bookmark feature allows them to go at their own pace.

It's easy to use. No computer experience is required. Easy-to-follow directions and simple navigation allow users at all computer skill levels to complete the course with ease.
